CECIL RALEIGH DIES AT 58 AD. MEN TO HAVE Author of "The Whip" and Many Other Melodramas.

London, Nov. 10.—Cecil Raleigh, the dramatic author, died to-day.

Cecil Raleigh was a prolific play-wright and carned fame as author of Drury Lane melodramas, one of which, "The Whip," was produced in the death of his father, in 1880. He eccived his education at home, never ttending either public or private echool or university, and he was prought up to no trade, calling or procession.

His entrance into the theatrical corld was as the manager of Miss Kate Lawler, of the Royalty Theatre. After a short term as secretary of a school of dramatic art he went back to the Royalty to manage the interests of president and vice-president. He was a member of the Actors' Association, the dramatic committee of the Authors' Society and the council of the Royal Botanic Society.
